Transitional Housing

We have provided safe, affordable and nurturing transitional housing at our Hope Houses for the past three decades. We operate five, six-bed homes (2 for women* and 3 for men) located in residential settings throughout Redwood City. Our homes are substance free and provide residents an opportunity to get back on their feet while they work towards their goals. Additionally, we offer programs which assist with rent, case management services and peer support.

We accept all gender identities and do not discriminate by race, religion, sex, gender, ethnicity, age, disability, sexual orientation, gender identity or gender expression.

Most residents are referred to us from Substance Use Disorder (SUD) Treatment programs, shelters, the criminal justice system and other referring agencies.

Qualifications:

- Successful completion of a SUD Treatment program.
- Willing to remain clean and sober.
- Residents must be working and or/enrolled in a vocational or other training program while living in the program (some exceptions may apply).
- Some residents will be required to participate in intensive out-patient or out-patient programs or counseling while living in our homes.
- Attendance at weekly house meetings and 12 step-meetings.
- Motivated to make positive changes in your life.
- Willing to follow the guidelines of the transitional program.
- Must be 18 years or older.
- Qualifies as low income.

Priority is given to graduates of our Women's Hope House Residential Treatment Program*
